

WATS 2010 - MINT at Forefront of Technology Presenting latest Grading Functionality on Apple iPad™

2 weeks after the iPad had been launched in the US, aviation training professionals could see its vast potential for the business when using the iPad together with MINT TMS' Electronic Grade Sheets. Attendees of this year's World Airline Training Symposium (April 27-29 in Orlando, Florida) ranked this combination as one of the top innovations showcased at the event.

“It is a brilliant idea to take the iPad into the simulator session and grade Captains and First Officers right then and there”, says Andreas Weber, CEO at CST Berlin. “The best thing is that no one needs to transfer it from paper into a record keeping system anymore but it is available on-line in real-time.”

Especially with regard to the upcoming AQP requirements, the Compliance and Training Management System MINT TMS meets the needs of its airline training customers. Corresponding to the overall principle of flexibility, grade sheets can be individually constructed as can be any other qualification-related form, e.g. certificates.

“MINT TMS incorporates a high level of automation by assigning qualifications based on grading and sign-off results which means a vast time saving and human error elimination for our customers”, explains Christian Hollmann, Vice President at MINT. We offer a standard product in which every customer can depict their individual business process. In fact, flexibility is our standard.”
